Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurFinalist in US Next Generation Indie Book Awards.A cast of unforgettable characters draws us into a world, vivid and haunting. A world where war comes suddenly; dynamite, fire, bullets: friends and family dying in the night. Stillpoint is a daring, controversial examination of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict that shows the struggles of ordinary men and women on both sides. Spanning the period from 1947 to the modern day and showing how lives are affected from Boston to Beirut, from Haifa to Rockport. Do we learn from history? It would appear that we dont. What we learn we can easily forget, but understanding is of a different order, it cannot be forgotten.Prsentation de l'diteurFinalist in US Next Generation Indie Book Awards.A cast of unforgettable characters draws us into a world, vivid and haunting. is a daring, controversial examination of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict that shows the struggles of ordinary men and women on both sides. Spanning the period from 1947 to the modern day and showing how lives are affected from Boston to Beirut, from Haifa to Rockport. Do we learn from history? It would appear that we dont. What we learn we can easily forget, but understanding is of a different order, it cannot be forgotten. Biographie de l'auteur Mallard first came to India in January 1990. In October of that year he met his guru, Ramesh S. Balsekar. Thereafter he returned to India as often as he could. He was the editor and publisher of the book, Like a large immovable rock, a Festschrift in appreciation of Ramesh S. Balsekar, first published in 1996. (Later published in India by Zen Publications) Reflections, from Lao Tzus Tao Te Ching, was first published in India in 2010. It is a highly accessible rendition of Lao Tzus great spiritual classic the Tao Te Ching. It won the 'US National Best Books Awards' in the category of eastern religion in 2009 and a year later won the 'International Best Books Awards' in the same category. Understanding, the simplicity of life, introduces readers to the insights and wisdom of Advaita Vedanta. The effectiveness of Mallards presentation comes from the plain language, that explains each philosophic concept in laymans terms. Evident also is a knack for conveying truths by means of vivid, concrete metaphors and engaging narratives, think parables, was how one reviewer described it. It was the winner in 2010 of the 'US Indie Excellence Book Awards' in the category new age non-fiction. It was a finalist in the 2011 'US National Best Books Awards' in the category of eastern religion and the next generation 'Indie Awards' in the category of spirituality. Understanding, is published by Zen Publications and will be available in. Mallards first book, a novel called 'The Meeting,' is no longer in print. It was, however, a teaching story written for parents whod behaved so violently toward their children the courts were involved. Mallard also publishes 'The Mountain Stream', an E-journal of the wisdom and insight of Advaita Vedanta, Zen, Taoism and others. (Published once a month.)
